

Production Supervisor North Shore Location

Sealy has a long history of making quality beds and has changed the way the world sleeps, leading the way in research, development and design.

In a world of mass manufacture, Sealy remains committed to handcrafting and manufacturing beds.

Sealy New Zealand is committed to excellence which is reflected in our approach to business, the quality of our products and our outstanding team.

The Production Supervisor role's primary responsibility is to support the Factory Manager and also ensure a safe working environment whilst achieving our required production targets.

This role has been identified as key to Sealy NZ's succession planning opportunities and as such, we are looking for candidates with the ambition and aspiration to join the ranks of senior management in the future. We are looking for applicants who will have worked within Production environments.

If you have strong people management, problem solving, attention to detail, accuracy, planning and organising skills, plus the following:

- An in-depth understanding of Health and Safety
- A strong understanding and experience in continuous improvement principles
- Strong written and verbal communication skills
- Strong customer relationship skills, then this could well be your next role.

If this sounds like the job for you and you want an opportunity to advance to the next level by working in a business with huge potential plus be part of this friendly team, then please forward your CV to bsandow@sealy.co.nz no later than Tuesday 17 September 2019.
